As part of that filing, you are also required to attach a copy of this letter and both the Traveler and Primary Trip Sponsor Forms (including attachments) you previously submitted to the Committee in seeking pre-approval for this trip. You must also report all travel expenses totaling more than $350 from a single source on Schedule VII of your annual Financial Disclosure Statement.

Because the trip may involve meetings with foreign government representatives, we note that House Members may accept, under the Foreign Gifts and Decorations Act, gifts "of minimal value [currently $350] tendered as a souvenir or mark of courtesy" by a foreign government. Any tangible gifts valued in excess of $350 received from a foreign government must, within 60 days of acceptance, be disclosed on a Form for Disclosing Gifts from Foreign Governments and either turned over to the Clerk of the House, or, with the written approval of the Committee, retained for official use.

U.S. Strategic Interests in Africa and Political Developments

Sub-Sahara Africa (SSA) comprises 49 diverse countries, each with their own histories, levels of economic and political development, cultures and languages. The region is viewed as one of growing strategic interest by the United States, Europe, China, Russia, and numerous other countries for its oil, mineral resources, and land. On security issues, SSA poses a number of challenges in the form of civil wars, border conflicts, terrorist activities, and pirating, that has prompted the United States to form a new military command—AFRICOM.

- What are the United States' strategic interests in Africa?
- What is the role of AFRICOM and what has been its reception?
- What are the current conflicts and possible outcomes/consequences for the United States?
- How severe is the threat of extremist Islamic movements and what is the international or U.S. role?
- What are the interests of China, Russia, and others in SSA and how is it manifested either in conflict or in cooperation with U.S. goals?
- How significant are conflicts in the Congo and movements such as the Lord's Resistance Army; and what responsibility, if any, does the international community have?
- What level of involvement does the U.S. have in multilateral peacekeeping operations based in Africa?
- How does AFRICOM work with civilian, diplomatic, and development agencies to support U.S. foreign policy objectives?

U.S. Relations with Ethiopia

Ethiopia is the second most populous country in Africa with a population of 86 million people in 2013. It is a federal parliamentary republic although it is criticized for having democracy deficits in the form of limitations on press freedoms, human rights, and the level of government control of the private sector. Nonetheless, its economy is one of the fastest growing on the continent and it has been a key U.S. ally in the Horn of Africa. The country faces a number of challenges in the form of low agricultural productivity and frequent droughts that affect food security, health issues including HIV/AIDS, and poverty. Addis is a major African hub with a number of headquarters for international companies and regional political organizations.

Donald Booth, U.S. Ambassador to Ethiopia (invited)

3:00-4:00 pm

Individual Discussions

Meetings will be scheduled between Members of Congress and individual scholars to discuss U.S. foreign policy. Scholars to meet with Members of Congress include David Rodriquez and Donald Booth for in-depth discussion of ideas raised in the morning and luncheon sessions.

Malawi: An Example of Africa's Progress

Scholars and Members of Congress will dine with President Banda who is a dynamic leader for both her country and the continent. Since 2004 President Banda has served in a number of government positions: as a member of Parliament, Minister of Child Welfare, Foreign Minister, and Vice President. She has been a champion of empowering women and protecting children and youth. The dinner will be a great opportunity to have a dialogue with one of Africa's most respected leaders.

Africa's Economic Development: The Role of Aid. Trade and Business

Despite a faltering global economy over the last several years, SSA has experienced record annual growth rates exceeding 5%. Many major U.S. companies see the continent as a growth market and are making significant developments there. Yet, there are hurdles to building a robust business climate remain—largely in the form of corruption, infrastructure deficits, regulatory burdens and a poorly-educated workforce. The United States allocates approximately $8 billion each year throughout Africa for programs focused on health, food security, and governance. (The largest recipients of aid are Kenya, Ethiopia, and Nigeria.) The United States is currently discussing a trade partnership agreement with the East Africa Community that some see as a model for future U.S.-Africa trade relations. Several countries are on track to meet the Millennium Development Goals of halving rates of poverty and hunger by 2015.

With impressive growth rates, how necessary is U.S. foreign assistance?

- To what extent, or when, can other forms of cooperation—in the form of trade and investment—supplant assistance?
- What has been the role of the Africa Growth and Opportunity Act (AGOA) in supporting development in Africa? What are its current limitations?
- How does the United States support political and economic environments that are conducive to U.S. business investments?
- Despite the noted progress and promising signs for the future, what are the current bottlenecks in Africa's development?

Global Competition from China and Others for Africa's Resources

Press reports and other analysis point to the growing interest of China, Gulf States, and other countries in Africa's varied resources. In some instances this manifests itself in so-called "land grabs" in which foreign entities seek to purchase or rent on a long-term basis vast tracks of land (and its water resources) for agricultural production to be exported back to the investing country. Such arrangements are believed to include minimal benefits to citizens of the hosting country and are vulnerable to corrupt practices. Other nations see the continent as an important source of oil and minerals and are making investments accordingly. China has been particularly active in recent years—at least one report estimates development assistance at approximately $75 billion from 2000 to 2011—with investments focused in Angola, the Democratic Republic of the Congo, Ethiopia, and Sudan.

- What are China's objectives in Africa, and what is the relevance to the U.S.?
- How do land grabs affect agricultural development? What are their impacts on smallholder farmers and their access to land and water? How extensive is this practice and what are the implications for the continent?
- To what extent does Africa's abundance of certain minerals drive the interests of some foreign countries? Do these activities reinforce a "resource curse"?

The State of Democracy, Human Rights and Religious Freedom in Africa

Democracy has become the norm in SSA, with the majority of African governments being fully or nominally democratic. Just two decades ago, perhaps only three African countries could be considered democracies. Despite this progress, a number of governments score poorly on Freedom House's index of political freedoms. These democracy deficits include limitations on the press, political organizations, and electoral transparency. Ethnic and religious tensions form part of the African landscape with its diversity of tribes, religions and Islamic movements. The 2013 report by the United States Commission on International Religious Freedom (USCIRF) identified three countries—Nigeria, Eritrea and Sudan—in SSA on its Tier 1, representing "systemic, ongoing and egregious violations." It identified Ethiopia as a country being closely monitored but not on its Tier 1 or 2 lists.

- To what extent should U.S. assistance be tied to the forms of governance, standards of human rights and religious freedom?
- What types of programs does the United States conduct that promote democracy and good governance in SSA?
- How does the African Union and Africa's regional economic communities support the movement toward stronger democracies and respect for human rights and religious freedoms?
- To what extent are elections in most African countries considered free and fair?

- What types of sanctions have the United States imposed as a result of USCIRF designations?
- What should U.S. policy be in countries that lack democratic principles, or rank low in regard to human rights and tolerance of religious freedom?

Food Security: Implications for Africa and the World

It is estimated that the global population will grow to more than nine billion people by 2050, putting increasingly difficult demands on farmers to meet growing and changing demands of wealthier consumers. Africa's agricultural development has been stagnant for several decades. Severe weather events, soil erosion, deforestation, pressures on water resources, and bad governance have produced some of the world's worst humanitarian crises and high levels of chronic hunger. The United States has committed significant resources to promote food security and agricultural development in Africa, and African countries have made similar commitments to raising productivity. The United States also provides the World Food Program with significant assistance to respond to humanitarian crises.

 What is the extent of food insecurity in Sub-Saharan Africa and trends for the future? · Is the era of African famines a plague of the past?

 With the current rate of investments by donors and African governments, when will significant progress begin to be seen with regard to food security?

 What is sustainable intensification? What is the relationship between agricultural and economic growth?

 Does Africa export commodities to the United States? What are barriers to agricultural exports to the United States, Europe, and within the continent?

 What are African attitudes toward genetically modified technology and why is this relevant to U.S. interests or to global food security?

How does U.S. food aid help to alleviate acute and chronic hunger in Africa?

Health Priorities in Africa and the U.S. Role

At the height of the HIV/AIDS epidemic, SSA was considered the poster child of bad practices with regard to disease management and treatment. Since the President's Emergency Plan for HIV/AIDS Relief (PEPFAR), prevalence rates have stabilized and declined in some areas, and effective treatment has extended lives. African countries are increasingly taking on a greater role in prevention and treatment with some observers urging wealthier countries, such as South Africa, to be transitioned off PEPFAR funds. Other diseases, such as malaria, continue to pose considerable problems. Malnutrition plagues many parts of the country that suffer from food insecurity, and the prevention of stunting through better nutrition in the first 1,000 days of life has become a major focus of efforts. At the same time, obesity is becoming more prevalent as wealthier populations adopt a more western-style diet and sedentary lifestyle.

- Given the investments the United States has made with PEPFAR funds, what are the prospects for transitioning recipient countries to other forms of health cooperation?
- Have U.S. programs helped to build the capacity of recipient countries to provide for the health needs of their citizens?
- How do food security and nutrition programs connect with broader health issues in most African countries?
- From the Ebola virus experience, Africa is perceived to be an incubator for global pandemics. Is this perception warranted and, if so, what is the responsibility of the international community?
- What role do U.S. institutions such as the Centers for Disease Control have in Africa?
- What are the remaining challenges that Africa faces in the years ahead?
